

Superior Cat Team Outplays Greenies But Comes Out On Short End of 20-13 Score

Big Blue Threat in First Quarter Finally Broken Up by Tough Breaks

By NORMAN GARLING
Kernel Editor

Unexpected cold weather, overcast skies, and a crowd of approximately 8,000 persons, was the scene portrayed last Saturday in the Tulane Stadium in New Orleans, as the supposedly weak and injured Green Wave grid machine triumphed over Kentucky's hard fighting Wildcats by a score of 20 to 13. It was the fourth and last of the Kentucky-Tulane series.

The defeat at the hands of Tulane was bitter medicine for the Wildcats to take, because statistics showed that Chet Wynne's boys had outplayed the Greenies throughout the entire 60 minutes. It was the sixth time that the New Orleans team has defeated the Kentuckians. The two schools started their football relations back in 1907. They met again on the gridiron in 1910. In 1932 a four-year contract was signed, and last Saturday's battle terminated this agreement.

The Wildcats were off in a gale as the game opened with Langan Hay going around end for 23 yards. Ayers came back with another end run for a gain of seven yards, and Davis starting around end and then cutting back through tackle went to Tulane's 13-yard marker. After making a yard at the line, Hay slashed through tackle for six more. Ayers went to the eight-yard stripe for a first down. Davis skirted the end for four more yards, and Hay crashed the center of the line for two more. On the next play Ayers went over for a touchdown. Ayers kicked the goal, but Kentucky was penalized 15 yards for holding on the play, and Able missed his next attempt.

It was these first few minutes of play that made everyone think that the Kentucky lads were going to give the Green Wave a terrific beating. This bright scene, however, soon began to fade, when early in the second quarter, Troy Odum, Tulane's left-handed ball heaver, threw a long pass to Watson, who caught it on the three-yard line and went over for the Green Wave's first score of the game. Watson failed in his attempt to place-kick the extra point and the score was tied, 6 to 6. Tulane's second touchdown also came as the result of a long pass. Late in the second quarter, Johnson's pass to Ellington, was intercepted by Gould on Tulane's 18-yard stripe. On the next play Odum again completed a long pass to Schneidau, who was not brought down until he had reached Kentucky's 27-yard line. Another pass was incomplete, but on the next play Odum passed to Memmas for a touchdown, and Watson place-kicked the conversion as the half ended.

Record Audience Hears Young Artist In Sunday Vesper

Iso Briselli, Well-known Violinist, Features Sunday Musicales

Iso Briselli, young Russian violinist, was presented in Memorial Hall Sunday afternoon and a large audience, the largest ever to assemble for a visiting artist of the Sunday afternoon series, received him with the enthusiasm worthy of one who has attained such distinction in his chosen field.

Presenting a program arranged to fill more than an hour, Mr. Briselli was gracious enough to respond with two encores. Three groups made up the program and an excellent variety in composition was shown, but the charm of artistry was most evident in the presentation of "Praelium and allegro" by Kreisler.

Edward Harris, whose brilliant accompaniments were features of the afternoon entertainment, was heard in Lexington during the Artists' Concert series two years ago and is quite a favorite in Lexington.

Transy Players Plan Production of Musical Comedy

"Lightnin'" to Be Presented by Stagercrafters, Thursday, Friday

The Stagercrafters of Transylvania college will present "Lightnin'" Thursday and Friday, November 21 and 22 at the Henry Clay High school auditorium. Prolonged rehearsals are being held day and night to make possible the presentation of this play, which is under the direction of Prof. Edward Saxton. The play is a comedy-drama and for the most part the comedy outweighs the drama. In two hours of excellent entertainment one is confronted with the problems and foibles of American life, intemperance and divorce.

"Lightnin'" Bill Jones, a lovable old vagabond, is one of the greatest of character studies. Winston Stubbs has the role of "Lightnin'" in the Stagercrafters presentation. His Cassius in "Julius Caesar" placed his name very high in the Stagercrafters hall of fame, and in the role of the vagabond in "The Tavern" his versatility was manifested in no small degree. Bill Jones, a slow drunken loafer, has the entire quaking his ridiculous bee story which is, incidentally, one of the high spots of comedy in the play.

Another particularly fine piece of acting is promised in the work of Elizabeth Rae Claxton as Mrs. Bill Jones. Miss Claxton is not only an actress of ability but is equally at home on the platform in oratory and debate.

Charles Trumbo, who has built a reputation as the perfect lover, will vary his style and become the villain of the story. Beecher Frank will assume the role of John Marvin, the hero. Mr. Frank's voice and bearing are well-suited to the part and in the court room scene his is very convincing. Evelyn Combs has the role of Mrs. Davis, an exotic dancer who is seeking a divorce and, in order to obtain it, stops at nothing. Tickets may be obtained at R. S. Thorpe and Sons.

SIGMA DELTA CHI WANTS RELEASE FROM 'NATIONAL'

University Journalists Accuse Central Office of "Excessive Costs, Abortive Fees"

ARE ENDORSED BY U. OF K. OFFICIALS

Formulate Plans for Revival of Old Local Newspaper Club

In a strongly worded telegram protesting against "excessive costs and abortive fees," Kentucky chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalistic society, petitioned the national organization of the group to recall the charter granted the local unit in 1927. The message was addressed to James C. Kiper, executive secretary of the organization to be read to the annual convention at Urbana, Illinois, then in session.

The action followed a decision of the active chapter made Friday night and secured the endorsement of President Frank McVeey, and Prof. Enoch Grehan, head of the Journalism department at the University. Both stated that they approved of the action and that they would support the chapter in its decision to cease affiliation with the national group.

The message stated that due to the fact that most students had little money to pay for such causes and that no benefit could be derived from cooperating nationally with the society, it would be better for all concerned to sever relations immediately. It was also stated that the money used to pay off expenses to the central group could be diverted to a more "worthy" cause, helping the local chapter to sponsor projects of note on the campus and become recognized as a leading organization at the University. The message was sent by Oliver Kash, secretary of the Kentucky chapter.

At the convention, where action was deferred to the executive committee of the fraternity, it was decided to withhold any decision concerning the withdrawal of the charter and to send a national officer to Lexington to investigate conditions thoroughly before a final decision was rendered.

Chapter members refused to comment upon their decision except to say that a chance of re-affiliation with the national organization was definitely out of the question. Reorganization into a local journalistic society will probably be the program of the chapter, it was said by one of the officers.

KENTUCKY PROFESSOR HONORED

An integral part of every institution of higher learning is its faculty, and all recognition of distinction gained by the professors tends to raise the rating of the institution to a higher plane. The University of Kentucky has always been proud of its faculty, and this pride was well-founded as is shown by the recognition awarded Prof. C. A. Lampert by the National Society of Arts and Sciences.

The society, which was founded in 1883 by Herbert Spencer, carries out its program each year with the assistance of regents, who are outstanding authorities in their respective fields. The work of Professor Lampert has been recognized as a public service and also extremely beneficial to the advancement of the arts, which is the primary purpose of the society.

Professor Lampert, as head of the music department, carries on many phases of the work, but that which won him the recognition by the society was his work with the orchestra, composed of students and townspeople which rehearses regularly twice a week and gives frequent concerts at Memorial Hall. He has also been outstanding for his direction of the Men's Glee Club, which has been enthusiastically received by audiences in many of the surrounding towns. It is indeed with pride that the University of Kentucky points to Prof. C. A. Lampert as a member of its faculty.

CASH OR CULTURE

Many learned men have in recent years devoted a great deal of labor to comprehensive studies of the American collegiate education. These erudite gentlemen have come forward from time to time with their conclusions as to the value of the four-year curricula to the students in terms of preparation for life.

Dr. William Leonard, who directed the six-year Pennsylvania study for the Carnegie Foundation, has summarized very briefly and thought-provokingly his conclusion arrived at as a result of this impartial scrutiny into the advance of higher education.

"American education," says Dr. Leonard, "is administered in isolated packages of specific ideas, segregated for the time being in self-contained 'courses,' elected semester-wise and cut off by examinations and 'credits' from any other living thing."

While his viewpoint may seem harsh to the graduate successful in terms of happiness as well as financial gain, it must appeal to that horde of alumni who have no jobs and to those others, equally numerous, who have not meshed well with life although "success" has come their way. No, the American educational system has not failed, but it has placed excessive emphasis on the attainment of material gain to the neglect of those cultural virtues, including the development of a good social consciousness, that go to make life really worthwhile.—The Barometer, Oregon State College.

THE SITUATION IN SMALL COLLEGES

When individuals appeal to the nation for increased support of the 600-odd small liberal colleges in the country, characterizing them as the seed beds of leadership and "among the principal sources of high character and noble ideals without which any purely economic system would collapse," they voice opinion in which leading impartial educators strongly concur.

The small liberal arts colleges have usually had to travel a road of thorns and obstacles. Their endowments at best have been meager. They possess only one-fourth of the capital funds behind all higher educational institutions, large and small, in the United States, and they include in their cloisters one-half of the students. While large universities have been spending huge sums in extravagantly beautifying and enlarging their physical aspects, the small colleges have carried on with scant funds that do not even suffice to pay their faculties fair salaries. The present period of economic depression has further multiplied the difficulties which in general beset these smaller institutions.

Distinctly American in nature, the small liberal arts college truly plays a most important role in the American educational system. Amid the growth of state-supported institutions and highly-endowed universities, the smaller college has held on as one of the strongholds of a truly cultural education. The broad opportunities which it offers for intimacy and for increased student-faculty fellowship have demonstrated the value of the small-unit education. The recent inclusion within several large institutions of a number of smaller divisions, such as the colleges in the quad plan, is a recognition of the advantages of the small college over the large educational plants. Yet the great bulk of these smaller institutions, along with the equally-neglected women's colleges, are forced to struggle along, leading a hand-to-mouth existence, while a few major institutions grow relatively opulent.

Regret is naturally occasioned by the fact that America's larger institutions cannot secure all the financial backing they could use to increase the salaries of faculty members or to erect luxurious Gothic and Gregorian buildings. But the plight of America's scores of worthy but financially starving colleges, particularly prevalent in the South and in certain portions of the West, brings to the surface one of the most pressing needs of modern American higher education.—The Daily Princetonian.

THE QUALITY POINT SYSTEM

The present senior class will be the first one to graduate under the quality point system. Under this system, which was inaugurated in the fall of 1933 when these seniors were sophomores, a student must have the same number of quality points as credits in order to graduate. Thus, every student must attain a general average of C to graduate.

The first real test of the validity of the system will be met when the time comes to consider the seniors as candidates for graduation. The question arises as to what the faculty will do about those students who have passed the required number of credits but have not amassed an equivalent number of quality points.

It is said that a faculty member here has estimated that as many as 40 or 50 students will not have the required number of quality points next June. What will happen to these seniors? Will the faculty refuse them degrees?

A large number of seniors are strongly protesting against this system. They claim that, since they entered under another system, they should be allowed to graduate under that same system. They argue that since they were sophomores when the ruling was put into effect, legally, it should apply to students in the classes of 1937 and those following.

The Beacon is neither defending nor attacking the quality point system. It is merely raising an important question. This question is very important to a large group of seniors. Many of them would like to know definitely just where they stand. Whether a large group will be denied a degree and whether the seniors will be held to a ruling which was made a year after they entered is important to all of us. It should be settled now—not in June.—The Beacon, Rhode Island State College.

U. S. EDUCATION DEPARTMENT

Establishment of a federal department of education, headed by a presidential cabinet member was declared the next important step towards better education by Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, at a recent gathering of educators in Providence, R. I.

Doctor Hutchins scored the "neglect" which education has suffered through so-called "economy" programs of politicians, large taxpayers and cranks in general. He placed direct responsibility for national education on the federal government. "Responsibility to equalize educational opportunities in the nation's schools must be in the hands of the federal authorities," he said.

Four thousand New England educators agreed that a cabinet officer would have "forced" the national government to give more attention to education in the last few years. They agreed that local and state budgets were cut out because it was easier to do so than to "dislodge the politicians who were actually squandering the public funds."

The entire educational program is far from being in a unified state. Even in closely allied sections of the country, methods go from one extreme to another. Staid old New England is particularly harassed by a lack of unified educational standards. Some states even lack a standard of education within their own boundaries. New York is singular in its state "regents" system.

No federal supervision of educational methods and teachers themselves is provided for in any way. Agriculture, commerce and labor are all integral parts of the governing system. Is not education as important as these?—Syracuse Daily Orange.

Hoi Polloi

By BOB HESS

Here I sit on the club car of the famous Pan-American of the L & N road. We (the team, managers, coaches, stewards, et al), entrained from New Orleans at 8:15 Saturday night after a most disastrous defeat which took place in the Tulane stadium.

We have just pulled out of Bowling Green. I sit at the table in the club car with Bob Davis, who had to have three teeth pulled as a result of the melee; Pete, the most ardent fan a football team ever had, and Able Ayers. Looking over Able's shoulder I see Dick Robinson chatting his fool head off with a dizzy New Orleans blonde. The conversation started at Nashville. Haven't been able to cavesdrop as yet. Would give anything to get in on Noble's line of bull.

Coach Wynne just looked in the car. He certainly is a downcast fellow, and why shouldn't he be. He earnestly believes that he has a better ball club than Tulane, and everyone else thinks so. Just like Ohio State a few weeks ago—passes were poison.

Down at the end of the club car sits Moon Garling, who covered the game for the Kernel and the Louisville Herald Post. He's pecking away at his portable now, much to the chagrin of those present—Next to Moon is Manager Gates McCauley, who is wrapped up in the legal terminology of a business law book. Bob Sherman and Joe Bosse just walked by and asked if I'm writing to that gal again. What gal? Who cares? Speaking of correspondents, it might interest Velma Hardesty to know that the first thing Bob Sherman did when he reached the hotel in The Crescent City was to write a long letter to one Ginnie Munz, 634 Greenwood, Cincinnati. Could it be that you are slipping, Velma?

Bo McMillan just walked by, kidding Frank McCool about last year's annual—"Among Kentucky's Fairest." (Insert, after getting back to Lexington: Congratulations, Bo, on the election Saturday night. Guess Frank will be able to kid you back now). Bo just came back with a so-called psychology test which a traveling salesman had given him. Yeah, I bit, but so did Moon, who had just finished his copy. It's a good one—have Bo show it to you sometime. Here comes little Joe Orr—yeah, he's gonna bite, too.

New Orleans Squibbs

We are now on the special train from Louisville to Lexington. We stopped off in the Falls City for a hurried dip in the feed-bag. Some gal met Duke Ellington at the station, so why should he eat anything. He's always thinking of something to eat, anyway. Smoke Joe (Red) Hagan is yelling at the top of his voice, the same way he has yelled during the whole trip.

Gates McCauley is a rotten Cromwell player. Jack Crain, who didn't miss a lick the whole trip, spit on the carpet on the special. Captain Jimmy Long asked him just what the idea was. Jack's only reply, "Shucks, fellows, I thought I was in the Kappa house." Gene Meyers can certainly sing mountain songs, and Lexie Potter is no slouch. On the way down, Red Hagan claimed that the engineer was drunk so he got up at three o'clock Friday morning yelling, "Hello, Smoke," all over the train.

Friday morning two bus loads of Kentucky gridiron race horses were taken for a sight-seeing trip. I truly believe that New Orleans is the most historically interesting city in the United States. Bob Davis mentioned the fact that he would like to spend his honeymoon in New Orleans. Look out, Billie Holiday! Tulane's campus is certainly pretty. It is right next to the campus of Loyola of the South. Understand that there is a dating bureau at Tulane, so that the rich women of the city may get together with the snake college boys. Rates are 35c an hour and 15c extra if the occasion calls for dress clothes. Nice way for a guy to work his way through college. When the bus driver mentioned that we were passing the former residence of the deceased Huey Long, I whipped out my camera and snapped a picture. You think it's funny? I snapped a picture, in my haste, of the house next door.

Tulane certainly has a fine cheering section, but a rotten band when compared with "The Best Band in Dixie." They have a hombra and femme section, and really make the noise. The bass drum and cymbals accentuate the rhythm of the yell. In the happy moments, the Green band would hit out in a hot tune, which was very pleasing to the ear. The gals were asking who that handsome number 47 was. Ole Neviers—lucky little boy—always on top.

Gates McCauley, Jack Crain, G. Sheehan, Tlek Scholtz, and Moon Garling all played a fellow four-bits apiece to have him show them all the dens of iniquity. What a time they had. Jack and Tlek tried to uproot a palm tree to take home as a souvenir.

The Subconscious Reveals
In his sleep, Sam Powell was heard to say, "Honey, don't call me a bum. Nobody else ever called me that." Guilty conscience, Sam?

SHOP SIGHTS

By BETTY EARLE

Collars distinguish the man—or so Graves-Cox and Kaufman's say! Graves-Cox is featuring a "special for young men" by Arrow—a wide-spread collar which buttons down and buttoned cuffs—in cheeks and solid colors. The new bright wool neckwear goes well with these and is quite mannish enough.

I've noticed the Duke of Kent collars suggested by Esquire are going well this fall, so if you haven't tried them out yet, you'd better tear down to Kaufman's for one right now. Oxford cloth, with collars blue or white, is the thing for shirts, too. And they do say cold weather is coming, so how about some knit gloves striped in red, green, blue, and yellow?

DUKE UNIVERSITY

Four terms of eleven weeks are given each year. These may be taken consecutively (graduation in three years) or three terms may be taken each year (graduation in four years). The entrance requirements are intelligence, character and at least two years of college work, including the subjects specified for Grade A Medical Schools. Catalogues and application forms may be obtained from the Dean.

And now for the girls—Mitchell, Baker, Smith is having a sale of fine $5.00 purses for $3.00. For dress, there are French antelope, and mat calf with chain handles, or maraschino clasp. For the street or campus, tailored seal, grain leather, or Savoy calf is good. For you who like wire-haired terriers, Martha Lynn has created a clever bag of Friesian cloth with a ferrier's head clasp of unbreakable Prystel. Two small loops of braided leather make the handle. For you who prefer the football hero, there is a bag of stitched suede having the shape of a football.

Baynham's is showing a new style of little oxford called Bromley squares, a British brogue. They are of calf, perforated throughout, including the little, and are made in all colors, Burgundy, ginger brown, brown, grey, and green.

For the dance, Shipp's has a unique formal of white crepe sprinkled with small gold stars and crescents. The décolletage is not too daring, and straps rolled instead of the plain flat type, and the belt wide, made of the material. The pleats in the back are stitched from the waist to hips, giving the effect of a very short court train guaranteed not to be under foot when you're dancing. The best part is the long red shoulder throw which lies serenely across your shoulders and matches the belt buckle.

Alumni News

Headquarters were also maintained in the Phoenix and Lafayette hotels in Lexington in connection with the Homecoming Game.

SEEN FROM THE PRESS BOX

By JOE QUINN
 Kernel Sports Editor

Your regular Monday morning quarterback was not among those present at the recent New Orleans gridiron get-together, but our Mr. Garling, savior of the Cleers, Illinois, Garlings, who is, incidentally, editor of the Kernel, was on the scene. As we were not even "there with a Crosley," it would be little less than futile for us to attempt any explanation of what went on and the why and the wherefore of it. However, in keeping with the Pressbox policy of always giving our readers first-hand information, we have turned over this space today to our Mr. Garling, who will now regale you with notes on the voyage. Take it away, Brother Garling.

What a time we had on this trip! The train was about a block away from the Union station in Lexington, when it was discovered that "Skipper" Mann, the trainer, was missing. We backed into the station, but in the meantime "Skipper" had taken his car and started to drive to Frankfort. We picked him up there.

Soon after the train had got under way we found that Jack "Vinegar" Puss' Crain and "Doc" Endicott were stowaways. They were underneath a pile of grips. They were scared to death of being caught all the way to Louisville. Every time the conductor passed through the car these two lugs would dive under one of the seats. One time Crain went under a seat and came out with his shirt half gone. He borrowed a polo shirt from Jimmy Long. The rough trip from here to Louisville was uneventful. I tried to write a term paper, but could not get my mind on it. We had a 15 minute lay-over in Louisville while our two special pullmans were being switched to the Pan-American. The team took a little airing while this was being done, and Manager McCauley and myself went across the street to a small restaurant. The first two persons we saw in there were Bob Hess and Ticky Scholz who were going to "beat" their way down to New Orleans.

We found that the Club Car was the most interesting place to be on the train, and thus we spent most of our time in that sanctuary. There was a radio, card table, magazines, desk and writing paper, and the other usual equipment. While poker and blackjack were being played in our two cars, Cromwell or Chinese Rummy got a play in the Club Car. After Hess had written about four letters on the train's stationery, he and McCauley got into the rummy game hot and heavy.

The afternoon dragged along rather slowly. We made stops at Bowling Green, Nashville, and Birmingham before it was time to hit the hay. When we hit Nashville the first thing McCool did was rush to a telephone. He came out all smiles. WSM, the Nashville radio station broadcasts the passing of the Pan-American every night at 5:08 o'clock. It was rather a funny feeling to hear the passing of this train over the radio and be riding on it at the same time. At this same time the announcer gave about a three minute talk about the Kentucky team and their being passengers on the Pan-American that night.

We arrived in New Orleans about 8:30, 35 minutes late. There were three buses waiting there for us, and we were taken to the Bienville hotel. After eating breakfast there, the team went out for a long walk. Two boys and myself took a stroll in the French section of the town. We walked about six blocks along Basin street, before we knew what it was. Everyone was back at the hotel about 10:45, and then we took a tour of the city. A very interesting place.

The Wildcats practiced in the Tulane stadium that afternoon for about two hours. Friday night after dinner they were taken to a show and then back to the hotel—having to be in bed at 10:00 o'clock. After McCauley had checked the team in, he, Crain, Hess, Scholz, Sheehan, and myself started out to see the town. We saw it in a big way, but I'll just skip the descriptions of our many experiences. One of the many places we visited was Martin's Bar. It was a sea food place, and we ate oysters and shrimp till they were coming out of our ears. Crain tried to bring a palm tree home with him, but he couldn't quite get it down. However, he did do a good job of hanging on it.

McCauley and I had a room together, and upon going to it Friday morning, we discovered there was a vacant room next door, and that we could get to it from ours. Crain and Scholz used it Friday night, but about seven o'clock Saturday morning a bell-hop caught them in it and chased them out. Crain almost had himself another thunder-mug, but I guess he forgot it in the rush.

After breakfast Saturday morning the team took a walk. This time a few of us again strolled through the old section of New Orleans, but this time we were interested in seeing the old courtyards, or patios, and the many antique stores. It was the most interesting place I have ever been. I am sorry that I did not get to go through some of the museums that were there.

The team ate lunch about 11:30 and then went to their rooms to rest before going out to the stadium. Joe Huddleston was the only one who took a topcoat. He must have had some intuition that it was going to be cold, because most of us almost froze down there. I sat in the press box during the game, and my hands were so numb that I could hardly use the typewriter. It was an open-air press coop, and the wind came through it like it does off Lake Michigan. After the game we came back to the hotel and rehearsed the game. We ate dinner at the hotel and then brought our grips down to the lobby and left them for the buses to take to the station and went downtown for a last look at the Crescent City.

We pulled out of New Orleans about 8:15 Saturday night. Quite a few of the players immediately went to bed, because the berths were made up when we got on the train. A few of us went back to the Club car, and listened to a few drunken bankers blow off for about an hour and then hit the hay. We arrived in Birmingham about 8:10 and a diner was put on there and the process of eating began again. Card games were again in order for the long ride back, and that is about all we did during the day. The ever-popular Club car was full all the way to Louisville.

After arriving in Louisville about 40 minutes late we ate in Union station there. Everyone was having a fit because our two Pullmans were going to be put on the "milk train" that runs between Louisville and Lexington. Those who have made that trip know what I mean. We left Louisville about 6:30, only one hour and 20 minutes late. As was expected, the ride up here was very rough and most everyone was disgruntled. However, a large poker game occupied most of the time. We got here about 10 o'clock Saturday night, and there were quite a few people at the station waiting for the team, even though they did lose.

I could go on for hours telling about the many things that happened on the trip, but space won't permit.

JACKSON, LEACH IN TENNIS FINALS

George Jackson, Louisville, Ky., has won the right to play the varsity champion for the championship of the school by winning the freshman tennis tournament. The final rung of the all-campus elimination will be played between Jackson and Sergis Leach, varsity champion, on the indoor courts soon.

Coach Downing is counting on the freshman players to fill the ranks of the departing varsity men. Young Jackson seems to have the makings of a top-notch tennis player and in the fall practice often defeated members of last year's varsity tennis squad. He went to the finals of the Intramural doubles this fall and has been outstanding in the try-outs for freshmen netters.

The freshmen show promise of developing a good squad next spring and plans are being made for trips to Louisville and Cincinnati. Members of the freshman team are George Jackson, Edward Randall, Bob Tabeling, Chas. Bugie, Tom Rentz, Chas. Duncan, Joe Dunlap, and Harry Alexander.

Superior Cat Team Bows to Greenies

the third period when Davis punted out of bounds on the Wildcats' 26-yard line. This gave the Greenies an opportunity for which they had been looking. In six plays the Tulane team went over for their third touchdown, and Watson again made the extra point good.

Late in the last quarter the Wildcats started a march toward the Tulane goal which ended in a touchdown for Kentucky. With the ball on his own 37-yard line, Johnson shot a pass to Hay who carried it to his 49 yard stripe. Another pass was incomplete, but on the next play Johnson passed to Davis and he crossed the Green Wave goal line for the Kentucky's second score. Hay place-kicked the extra point.

The Wildcats looked like they were going for another touchdown when Tulane fumbled and Robinson recovered on the Greenies 30-yard line. A double pass, Johnson to Hay, failed to gain. Johnson dropped back and threw a long pass which was intercepted by Moore behind Tulane's goal line. This gave the ball to Tulane on its 20-yard mark. The Greenies immediately kicked the ball going to Kentucky's 45-yard line. Johnson dropped back and tossed a long pass, but it was intercepted by Muntz on Tulane's 11-yard stripe. This ended Kentucky's threat, and the final gun cracked after the Green Wave had run two more plays.

Statistics show that Kentucky gained 236 yards from the line of scrimmage, while Tulane only gained 166. The Wildcats made 14 first down, and Tulane made nine. The Green Wave received four penalties while the Kentuckians only received one setback.
